

AURIC

- SONGS FROM A GOLDEN AGE -

Based on texts by Calderón de la Barca, Miguel de Cervantes and Lope de Vega Translated & Adapted by Paula Rodriguez

Designed & Illustrated by Maya Goldstein

©2020 All rights reserved to Paula Rodriguez and Maya Goldstein

The book AURIC (Songs From A Golden Age) presents a selection of texts from Spanish Golden Age authors which I have translated and adapted to English. These texts were originally created for the Gig-Theatre show AURIC (Songs From A Golden Age), an experience that merges spoken-word and experimental music composed by Arthur Astier.

Authors such as Miguel de Cervantes, Calderón de la Barca and Lope de Vega wrote the masterpieces of their time reflecting on universal matters as a profound dissection on the human condition.

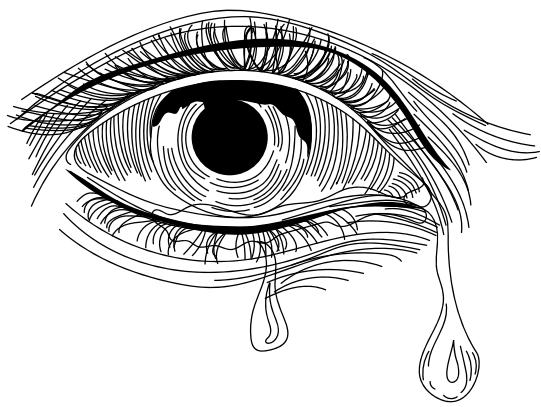

As all good classics, these texts still resonate strongly. My main objective is to tell the urgent subject matters of the Spanish Golden Age in an accessible way to today's international audience. I have given special attention in recreating the Spanish meter, as well as incorporating the vast imagery of these pieces, in order to bring them to life in all of their dimensions and immense beauty.

Thanks to all those who have supported us in the creation of this book. Special thanks to Ben Naylor who mentored the translation and adaptation of all the Songs.

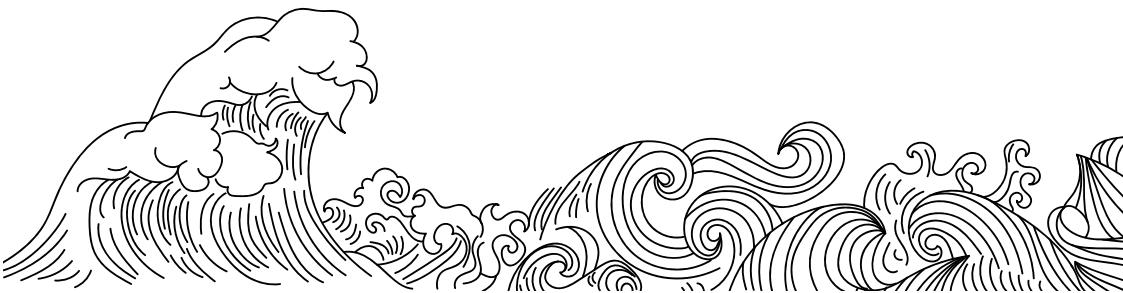

Paula Rodríguez

Desmayarse, atreverse, estar furioso, áspero, tierno, liberal, esquivo, alentado, mortal, difunto, vivo, leal, traidor, cobarde y animoso; no hallar fuera del bien centro y reposo, mostrarse alegre, triste, humilde, altivo, enojado, valiente, fugitivo, satisfecho, ofendido, receloso; huir el rostro al claro desengaño, beber veneno por licor süave, olvidar el provecho, amar el daño; creer que un cielo en un infierno cabe, dar la vida y el alma a un desengaño; esto es amor, quien lo probó lo sabe.

Lope de Vega

To faint and to dare and to be outrageous, elusive, liberal, deadly, and exultant, encouraged and detached, tender and distant, loyal, traitorous, afraid and courageous:
to lack rest and focus, to feel ravenous, to be sad, cheerful, humble, and arrogant, angry and peaceful, fugitive, and constant, satisfied, offended, suspicious, jealous.
To, smiling, face the clear disappointment, to drink poison as the sweetest infusion, to neglect the prize and take the punishment.
To think that hell can fit the whole firmament; to give your life and soul to an illusion, To starve the reason and feed the argument.
To speak to eat to breathe in strange conditions, to understand the world through a blurred glass, to hide from daylight under your dark past, to accept the challenge without restrictions.
To sweat to dream and to wake from delusions, to tell the same old tale and play the parts, to go to bed and pray for greener grass, to passionately search for some solutions.
To train your stomach to hunger and sorrow, to bite your nails, your lips, to grow your hair, to listen to songs waiting for tomorrow, to wish to find a simple sign to follow, to try, to seek, to look, to think, and care, to be a patient with a life to borrow.
To feel the spell coming from the river's mist, to sing and dance and shout, to stop the time, to banish and go wander for a while.
To be a magician and an alchemist, to delete your name from every single list.

To grow in self-esteem and touch the sublime and fall from grace in the blink of an eye, to fantasise about being touched and kissed, to release your body in the cold white sheets.
To smoke to drink t'interrogate the night, to find new words to name nature's sweet gifts.
To be happy, mental, to be at peace, eternal, brief, godless, to see the light, to call the fire brigade and the police.
To cancel your appointments and your diet, to be curious, nervous, present, and gone, to rise before the sun reaches the dawn, to work out how to rock the rocket science, to hate and to enjoy the clinking silence.
To look at the predictions for Capricorn, to feel like Martin Luther King and Eva Peron and find your self, for no reason, crying.
To let your senses and desires grow, to be holy, jolly, like a true angel, to fall, to fly, to float, with the tide's flow.
To whisper to the birds while the sun glows, to fear all or nothing, to court danger, this is Love! Those who tried it, they shall know.

LOVE based on a sonnet by Lope de Vega

Ya que quieres, crüel, que se publique de lengua en lengua y de una en otra gente del áspero rigor tuyo la fuerza, haré que el mismo infierno comunique al triste pecho mío un son doliente, con que el uso común de mi voz tuerza.
Y al par de mi deseo, que se esfuerza a decir mi dolor y tus hazañas, de la espantable voz irá el acento, y en él mezcladas, por mayor tormento, pedazos de las míseras entrañas.
Escucha, pues, y presta atento oído, no al concertado son, sino al ruído que de lo hondo de mi amargo pecho, llevado de un forzoso desvarío, por gusto mío sale y tu despecho.
El rugir del león, del lobo fiero el temeroso aullido, el silbo horrendo de escamosa serpiente, el espantable baladrio de algún monstruo, el agorero graznar de la corneja, y el estruendo del viento contrastado en mar instable; del ya vencido toro el implacable bramido, y de la viuda tortolilla el sensible arrullar; el triste canto del envidiado búho, con el llanto de toda la infernal negra cuadrilla, salgan con la doliente ánima fuera, mezclados en un son, de tal manera, que se confundan los sentidos todos, pues la pena cruel que en mí se halla para cantalla pide nuevos modos.
De tanta confusión no las arenas del padre Tajo oirán los tristes ecos, ni del famoso Betis las olivas, que allí se esparcirán mis duras penas en altos riscos y en profundos huecos, con muerta lengua y con palabras vivas, o ya en escuros valles o en esquivas playas, desnudas de contrato humano, o adonde el sol jamás mostró su lumbre, o entre la venenosa muchedumbre de fieras que alimenta el libio llano.

h

Que puesto que en los páramos desiertos los ecos roncos de mi mal inciertos suenen con tu rigor tan sin segundo, por privilegio de mis cortos hados, serán llevados por el ancho mundo.
Mata un desdén, atierra la paciencia, o verdadera o falsa, una sospecha; matan los celos con rigor más fuerte; desconcierta la vida larga ausencia; contra un temor de olvido no aprovecha firme esperanza de dichosa suerte...
En todo hay cierta, inevitable muerte; mas yo, ¡milagro nunca visto!, vivo celoso, ausente, desdeñado y cierto de las sospechas que me tienen muerto, y en el olvido en quien mi fuego avivo, y, entre tantos tormentos, nunca alcanza mi vista a ver en sombra a la esperanza, ni yo, desesperado, la procuro, antes, por estremarme en mi querella, estar sin ella eternamente juro.
¿Puédese, por ventura, en un instante esperar y temer, o es bien hacello siendo las causas del temor más ciertas?
¿Tengo, si el duro celo está delante, de cerrar estos ojos, si he de vello por mil heridas en el alma abiertas?
¿Quién no abrirá de par en par las puertas a la desconfianza, cuando mira descubierto el desdén, y las sospechas, ¡oh amarga conversión!, verdades hechas, y la limpia verdad vuelta en mentira?
Canción desesperada, no te quejes cuando mi triste compañía dejes; antes, pues que la causa do naciste con mi desdicha aumenta su ventura, aun en la sepultura no estés triste.

X

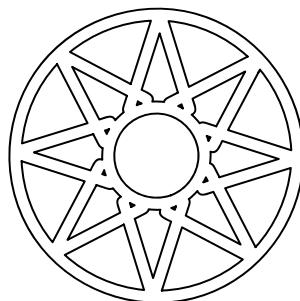

Don Quijote de la Mancha, Cervantes

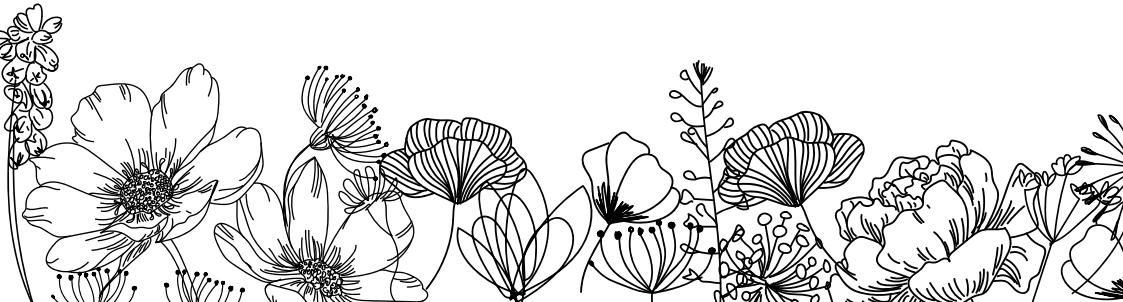

On far high cliffs and under dark hard stone, with deadly tongue and with some living words, in earth's deep places and beyond the clouds.
Where human contact is profoundly unknown.
Where the sunlight never touches the birds, or in the middle of poisonous crowds.
Where the beasts feed from the innocent mouse, where deserts have no end and have no source.
There, the hoarse echoes of this evil song should sound with such a rigor such a tone, that bending every second, every force, should blow and take the ear of the world.
Listen to this broken, unpleasant song and let your voice tremble and raise your cup, for though we are breathing now we know we'll die, for though we are falling now we will rise up.
Fear is everywhere waiting for us.
We live in a suspicion that is false.
Honesty is a fantasy; truth is dead.
And this sad, fierce and absurd world has been absent and slept while growing small with hesitations that have turned it deaf.
And in the oblivion of its silent clef and among so many other wild torments this world keeps seeking for hope through the shadows, desperately seeks; with a mind so narrow that seems as if there are not unravelments and finds no answer nor no bow no arrow.
The lies are rising flames, the point is shallow and I can feel the frailty of my soul and I can see uncertainty being certain and I can touch the limits of this hole.
How to redeem my anger how to know whether this words I am speaking now are wrong, I heard it in my sleep there was a voice.

But my fever was high and my calm low.
There are not enough verses in this song and there is too much light and too much noise and now I know that I don't have a choice but to discover all fears and doubts, all suspicions, all nightmares and all myths turning into victorious, glorious hymns followed by the masses and the White House.
Listen to your podcasts and your kings, they have the right to get into our skins and feel the slow conversion of our worries with dexterous precision becoming true and let this ballad whisper of our furies.

DESPERATE SONG based on Grisostomo's Desperate Song. Don Quixote by Cervantes

Y, en esto, por un lado descubrióse del sitio un escuadrón de ninfas bellas, con que infinito el rubio dios holgóse.
Venía en fin y por remate dellas una resplandeciendo, como hace el sol ante la luz de las estrellas; la mayor hermosura se deshace ante ella, y ella sola resplandece sobre todas, y alegra y satisface.
Bien así semejaba cual se ofrece entre líquidas perlas y entre rosas la Aurora que despunta y amanece; la rica vestidura, las preciosas joyas que la adornaban, competían con las que suelen ser maravillosas.
Las ninfas que al querer suyo asistían, en el gallardo brío y bello aspecto, las artes liberales parecían; todas con amoroso y tierno afecto, con las ciencias más claras y escondidas, le guardaban santísimo respecto; mostraban que en servirla eran servidas, y que por su ocasión de todas gentes en más veneración eran tenidas.
Su influjo y su reflujo las corrientes del mar y su profundo le mostraban, y el ser padre de ríos y de fuentes.
Las yerbas su virtud la presentaban; los árboles, sus frutos y sus flores; las piedras, el valor que en sí encerraban.

El santo amor, castísimos amores; la dulce paz, su quietud sabrosa; la guerra amarga, todos sus rigores.
Mostrábasele clara la espaciosa vía por donde el sol hace continuo su natural carrera y la forzosa.
La inclinación o fuerza del destino, y de qué estrellas consta y se compone, y cómo influye este planeta o signo, todo lo sabe, todo lo dispone la santa y hermosísima doncella, que admiración como alegría pone.
Ella abre los secretos y los cierra, toca y apunta de cualquiera ciencia la superficie y lo mejor que encierra.
Mira con más ahínco su presencia: verás cifrada en ella la abundancia de lo que en bueno tiene la excelencia; moran con ella en una misma estancia la divina y moral filosofía, el estilo más puro y la elegancia; puede pintar en la mitad del día la noche, y en la noche más escura el alba bella que las perlas cría; el curso de los ríos apresura, y le detiene; el pecho a furia incita, y le reduce luego a más blandura; por mitad del rigor se precipita de las lucientes armas contrapuestas, y da vitorias y vitorias quita.

Viaje al Parnaso, Cervantes

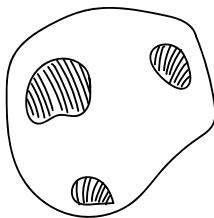

She shines without limits and with no control, before her, the great power is undone.
She satisfies the eyes and stills your soul.
The clothes, the precious jewels that adorn her ears, her neck, her hair, and endless limbs, compete with the golden spark of the Sun.
She influences the tides and the winds, diving into the deepest of the seas to give birth to the rivers and the springs.
She knows the remedy hidden in weeds, in all flowers, trees, fruits, and in all stones, they offer her their virtue and their seeds.
The holy love, offers her its chastity; the bitter war, its rigorous victories, the sweet peace, its tasty quiet mystery.
The sun reveals to her the untold stories, invites her into his own burning chamber to celebrate their pure celestial glories.
He tells her about all that he remembers; his inclinations and his true destiny, his past, his dreams, his fears, and his hard labour.
She knows it all in its great complexity and she has everything and she needs none.
She is full and empty, she knows not enemy, for no one can hurt her, she knows not harm.
She shares the room of the soul and of the mind with the divine and moral philosophy.
She paints the day in the middle of night, where the darkness seems the brightest honesty and transforms daylight into silent dusk.
The flow of the floods she takes to ecstasy, she rules among the streams- and waterfalls, she reduces wild fury to gentleness and reconciles opponents, without laws.

She gives and takes the weapon and caress, she opens all the secrets, but to close them, in her there are no limits no defence.
Look at her closely, see the purest gem and witness the abundance of excellence.
Nothing to hide, to fight or to condemn, in her there are no fears to be cleansed.

NYMPH based on a text from Journey to Parnassus by Cervantes

Esos rasgos de luz, esas centellas que cobran con amagos superiores alimentos del sol en resplandores, aquellos viven, si se duelen dellas.
Flores nocturnas son; aunque tan bellas, efímeras padecen sus ardores; pues si un día es el siglo de las flores, una noche es la edad de las estrellas.
De esa, pues, primavera fugitiva, ya nuestro mal, ya nuestro bien se infiere; registro es nuestro, o muera el sol o viva.
¿Qué duración habrá que el hombre espere, o qué mudanza habrá que no reciba de astro que cada noche nace y muere?

El Príncipe Constante, Calderón

Those dots of light, those burning planets that with superior manner transform the Sun's nourishment into the miracle of man, hiding our mysteries and our mechanics.
Those flowers of the night the orbs inhabit, ephemeral, expiring as they burn; for if the flower's live of days but one, the stars take but one only night to vanish.
What shock and domination do we not suffer from the good and evil in those spheres?
What prays and hopes do we not offer?
In those fugitive remote glowing tears our destinies are written kind or rougher, for man is made of stardust and of fears.
Those enlightened watchers of our dreams are hanging from our perspective, inverse.
Looking down onto us as if we were cursed, knowing better than we do of our extremes.
We should attend the stars, for still it seems that in our brains we own the universe, we make ourselves and keep our promises but only they withhold what our life means.
Around that distant cosmos we are floating, inside us there is a question and a find but we are part of it and we are hoping to understand the message as it shines, to perceive ourselves in time and space glowing, to expand the constellation of our minds.

TO THE STARS based on a sonnet from The Constant Prince by Calderon

Amor, no te llame amor el que no te corresponde, pues que no hay materia adonde no imprima forma el favor.
Naturaleza, en rigor, conservó tantas edades correspondiendo amistades; que no hay animal perfeto si no asiste a su conceto la unión de dos voluntades.
De los espíritus vivos de unos ojos procedió este amor, que me encendió con fuegos tan excesivos.
No me miraron altivos, antes, con dulce mudanza, me dieron tal confianza, que, con poca diferencia, pensando correspondencia, engendra amor esperanza.
Ojos, si ha quedado en vos de la vista el mismo efeto, amor vivirá perfeto, pues fue engendrado de dos; pero si tú, ciego dios, diversas flechas tomaste, no te alabes que alcanzaste la victoria que perdiste si de mí solo naciste, pues imperfecto quedaste.

El Caballero de Olmedo, Lope de Vega Love, don't let them call you love those who don't believe in you, for in all matter, in truth fancy, can a deep print carve.

Nature, and all gods above have been for so many ages arranging the heart's exchanges so there is no perfect animal whose birth is not attainable by the union of two strangers.
The living spirits of your eyes lightened this pure love in me and with a flaming so free that these lavish fires raise.
You did not look with proud eyes, your sweet sight had no defence and gave me such confidence that, with so little implied the tricks and hopes of the mind think and breathe correspondence.
Eyes, if it has stayed with you the same effect from my sight, love will have a perfect life, for it was devised of two.
But if the blind gods are cruel enough to miss their clear target and your heart's fruits had not harvest, then their victory is deformed.
If from me only love was born, my eyes will remain in darkness.

EYES based on a text from The Knight of Olmedo by Lope de Vega

Ir y quedarse y con quedar partirse, partir sin alma y ir con alma ajena; oír la dulce voz de una sirena y no poder del árbol desasirse; arder como la vela y consumirse haciendo torres sobre tierna arena; caer de un cielo y ser demonio en pena y de serlo jamás arrepentirse; hablar entre las mudas soledades, pedir prestada sobre fé paciencia y lo que es temporal llamar eterno; creer sospechas y negar verdades es lo que llaman en el mundo ausencia: fuego en el alma y en la vida infierno.

Lope de Vega

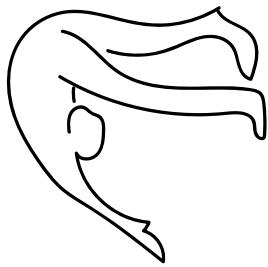

To depart and by the act of leaving to stay, to go soulless bearing another soul along, to listen to the echo of a mermaid's song and keep the shore unable to turn away.
To embark on adventure with no clear aim by making towers of sand for too long.
To be a fallen fiend, who's done no wrong and joyfully embrace the sweet-sour pain.
To deny what's true, and its contrary speaking to yourself when you are alone, to test your patience and your faith calling eternal what is temporary.
This we all know as loneliness of the soul, fire of the spirit, and hell in a life's breath.

TO DEPART AND TO STAY based on a sonnet by Lope de Vega ¡Ay mísero de mí, y ay infelice!

Apurar, cielos, pretendo, ya que me tratáis así, qué delito cometí contra vosotros naciendo.
Aunque si nací, ya entiendo qué delito he cometido; bastante causa ha tenido vuestra justicia y rigor, pues el delito mayor del hombre es haber nacido.
Sólo quisiera saber para apurar mis desvelos —dejando a una parte, cielos, el delito del nacer—, ¿qué más os pude ofender, para castigarme más?
¿No nacieron los demás?
Pues si los demás nacieron, ¿qué privilegios tuvieron que yo no gocé jamás?
Nace el ave, y con las galas que le dan belleza suma, apenas es flor de pluma, o ramillete con alas, cuando las etéreas salas corta con velocidad, negándose a la piedad del nido que deja en calma; ¿y teniendo yo más alma, tengo menos libertad?
Nace el bruto, y con la piel que dibujan manchas bellas, apenas signo es de estrellas —gracias al docto pincel—, cuando, atrevido y crüel, la humana necesidad le enseña a tener crueldad, monstruo de su laberinto; ¿y yo, con mejor instinto, tengo menos libertad?

Nace el pez, que no respira, aborto de ovas y lamas, y apenas bajel de escamas sobre las ondas se mira, cuando a todas partes gira, midiendo la inmensidad de tanta capacidad como le da el centro frío; ¿y yo, con más albedrío, tengo menos libertad?
Nace el arroyo, culebra que entre flores se desata, y apenas sierpe de plata, entre las flores se quiebra, cuando músico celebra de las flores la piedad que le dan la majestad del campo abierto a su huída; ¿y teniendo yo más vida, tengo menos libertad?
En llegando a esta pasión, un volcán, un Etna hecho, quisiera sacar del pecho pedazos del corazón.
¿Qué ley, justicia o razón negar a los hombres sabe privilegio tan süave excepción tan principal, que Dios le ha dado a un cristal, a un pez, a un bruto y a un ave?

La Vida es Sueño, Calderón

Oh wretched me, oh miserable me.
Heavens themselves I would question: Why would you treat me like this?
What was my foul mortal sin?
To be born was my transgression?
Now I see in this bleak passion our greatest crime is to be.

For we are condemned as we see the first light of this dull world and the justice of its law as I was born, sentenced me.
So I ask you heavens tell me: Apart from the great sin of life, what else I've done in your eyes that you forsake me like this?
What destiny waits on me?
What do you punish me for?
If all creatures free are born, why is this prison my home?
What privilege others own that I haven't been worthy of?
Birds are free, the bird that sings and that with no effort flies, cutting the frames of the skies by only shaking his wings, challenging all of the winds, leaving the warmth of his nest to become horizon's guest, taking his ethereal road.
And with a more complex soul, must then my freedom be less?
Beasts are free, the beast that roars and grunts with a savage nature, made of bone and flesh, a creature, whether a hog, hound or horse, used by man in all his wars.

Brutes are tamed by human need, their instincts turned in cruelty.
Beasts don't rule in their own force.
And with a drive better more, why my freedom less should be?
Fish are free, the spawn that breeds where the tender seaweed float, under the hull of the boat, water lives and water breathes.
When from wave to wave it speeds, measuring the mighty sea, testing its profundity to its depths so dim and chill.
And with so much freer will,
why my freedom less should be?
Streams are free, those silver snakes that to the rivers give birth, feeding the veins of the earth with crystal that never breaks and with a song that awakes the flowers to every season, like some benevolent demon pouring new paths on their ways.
And with a life that awaits, why can not I have my freedom?
Thinking of this I do feel a volcano in my chest, I could pluck from out my breast bit by bit my burning me; For what justice can decree sentence, repress and deny, freedom from a life like mine?
A sweet gift which is bestowed to the crystal stream that flows, to fish that swim, birds that fly?

FREEDOM based on a text from Life Is a Dream by Calderón de la Barca.

Noche, fabricadora de embelecos, Loca, imaginativa, quimerista, que muestra al que en ti su bien conquista los montes llanos y los mares secos.

Lope de Vega

•

•

Night, fabricator of mysterious lies, mad, gifted, imaginative, fanciful.
You show all lovers who do trust in you the far mountains flat and the oceans dry.
You carry your dominions through the skies, where thunders roar and echoes do obey.
You cry your nightmares on the thin dark air and let mortals sleep with wet open eyes.
Your wishes become clearer with the light of sweet new morning that reveals thin shadows and pale ghosts among the fields, where landscapes of reality seem bright.
Oh night, you curse me with your proud beauty, I want to stay all silent and all still, to feel you deeper in this lonely chill.
You speak no words as I perform my duty.
I am blindly obedient to your will,
I do not want to wake beyond your hour, for all seems better under your soft power, your tender blanket cures me of my ills.

NIGHT based on a poem by Lope de Vega

